Since joining the EU in 1986, Portugal has developed tremendously, striving to catch up with its European partners and develop its international trade. In Portugal the UK is regarded as a supplier of products and services of excellence.

Over 2 million British tourists visit Portugal every year and around 80,000 British nationals are part-time or permanent residents. There are an estimated 300,000 Portuguese nationals living and working in the UK.

Portugal is the UK's 15th largest export market in Europe, while the UK is in the top five largest investors in Portugal (after France and Spain, and followed by Germany and the Netherlands).
